Still, we aren't keen to make anyone who asks a moderator. You have never helped to report posts to the modteam and started two competing subreddits of your own, /r/natureisclever and /r/natureismellow.

You then made a post here attempting to advertise for one of them.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

Also, why did you buy yourself gold, if I may ask? Gold doesn't do anything, and is usually gifted by other users.

It's more about giving money to a website I like then getting benefits for myself. And I didn't make a post with the intention to advertise anything.

I personally don't think a mod should unilaterally remove a post that has received 4000+ upvotes, especially if the grounds it is removed on are as subjective as they are in this case. Even if there's no gore, blood or fighting a post can still be metal and a standoff between an elephant and a rhino can definitely be considered metal in my opinion. Regardless of whether you think it's metal or not I don't think a mod should be able to remove a 4000+ upvote post without consulting the other mods.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[−] from DageParty N M H via /r/natureismetal to YoSoyUnPayaso sent 4 months ago

I did not remove it for the lack of gore. It was removed because nothing metal happened.

It would not have had to have been removed at 4000 upvotes if someone else had caught it.

There was no fight, no attack, nothing metal. An elephant throwing a stick does not qualify for this subreddit.

Moderators are able to act on their own using their best judgement. I received several PMs thanking me for the removal despite the poster protesting.

If moderators have to wait for other moderators who are not online to remove posts it only exacerbates the issue. If those other moderators were online they should have removed it.

I'm not saying wait in all cases, I'm saying if a post has such a large amount of upvotes don't remove it because you personally think it isn't metal without consulting the other mods. Your interpretation of "nature is metal" isn't the only one. I think that a standoff between two massive animals is definitely metal despite the lack of actual fight.

You have too lax an opinion of metal for this subreddit then. Unless something actually happens, or there is some notable detail that can actually be described as brutal, terrifying, or gruesome, posts should not be allowed.

Every post on the current front page can fit into one of those categories.

Terrifying:

This post, the elephant throwing a stick

, is not considered any of these.

What sets us apart from a general nature subreddit is that we have standards. You joined to increase the quality of this subreddit, so do that.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from YoSoyUnPayaso MN H via /r/natureismetal to DageParty sent 4 months ago

So only posts that fit in any of those three categories can be considered metal in your opinion? I'd say the top/all time post of this sub doesn't fit in any of those. Does that mean it needs to be removed? You're missing a fourth category which would entail impressive displays of strength, animals standing their ground (like the top/all time post). Under this one could also put an elephant and a rhino, two of the most impressive and strong animals in the world, standing off against each other. I'm not saying my opinion is better than yours or anything but that's just how I feel. You may think that's too lax, but I think you're too strict.

> You joined to increase the quality of this subreddit, so do that.

'scuse me? You don't think I increase the quality of this sub?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from DageParty MN H via /r/natureismetal to YoSoyUnPayaso sent 4 months ago

Yes, the all time top post of a ram chasing a bike should be removed, in my opinion. But because it is not nature.

It is terrifying to some to be chased by an animal with huge horns in an attempt to kill you.

I would not classify "animals standing their ground" as metal. Almost all animals do this. Regardless of how strong the animal is, if it does nothing it does not belong here.

/r/natureisclever was created for the purpose of showcasing animals that do something smart, like use a tool. Like the elephant.

I think that if you argue to keep posts that don't fit in this subreddit that you are not working to increase its quality.

By the way, I'm creating a long survey now that includes the repost time limit increase and the repost upvote count rules we discussed last week. You were right that we should include multiple questions.

Can you think of more we should include?

> I think that if you argue to keep posts that don't fit in this subreddit that you are not working to increase its quality.

I think that never having contributed anything to a sub, ever, and then starting to lay down your opinion as law the moment you become a mod is more detrimental to the sub's quality than being a regular contributor and engaging in a discussion about what should and shouldn't be allowed, especially if the question is as subjective as "is it metal?"

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from DageParty MN H via /r/natureismetal to YoSoyUnPayaso sent 4 months ago

So because I don't care about karma means I can't possibly understand how the subreddit works?

I've posted the poll, we'll let the community decide how to define "metal" and "nature".

I gave you two hours to suggest a question to add, since you were so adamant about it the last time it was discussed. Do you have no input?

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from YoSoyUnPayaso MN H via /r/natureismetal to DageParty sent 4 months ago

I'm not talking about karma, I'm talking about contributing to a subreddit I (and I assume you as well) care about. How can you tell me that I am not working to make this a better sub when I frequently contribute to it while you have never contributed anything to it yourself? I find that to be rather insulting.

> I gave you two hours to suggest a question to add, since you were so adamant about it the last time it was discussed. Do you have no input?

Hello, I posted this: https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/5gl1lb/smart_elephant_uses_a_stick_to_distract_a/

Recently and it got removed by /u/DageParty

I'm not bitter about it being removed or anything and I respect his right as a mod to remove things as he sees fit.

I'm just curious if the rest of the mod team thinks this post would be considered

"metal" or not.

Dage said that it was removed because there was no fight. I argue that the elephant using tools and intelligence to avoid the fight is more metal then them actually fighting.

Anyways, I created /r/natureisclever

I think it's a good/different way to appreciate nature. I don't know if you guys want to plug it in on your sidebar or something if post like this will be removed in the future.

Thanks for making this subreddit possible! I love you all!

I think we're tagging to many of them. there wasn't this many before us 3 got modded, and i think it takes away from the sub. and as Dage so politely put 'i need to do my job' which is keeping the sub a good place. so i believe the nsfw tags need clarifying. by one of the older higher ranking mods.

is less more, or am i just over reacting to nothing?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[−] from DageParty [M] MN H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 4 months ago

We can leave it up to the senior moderators.

This was the post I tagged as NSFW:

https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/5gccqr/partially_eaten_deer_spinal_column_exposed/

It is a dead deer with all of the flesh eaten from around its spinal column.

On the post, replying to a user asking for a NSFW tag, Bryce said

> "NSFW is only for lots of blood and gore. or distressing things. this is not any of those. you came here for gore and nature killing each other. so this stuff is expected. the tags are only for the stuff that is the next level and you should be warned for."

Clearly this user was distressed and made a comment to express that. I do not think we should tell users what distresses them. And when it is a user that came from inside our subreddit and not from r/all requesting a NSFW tag we should take the request seriously.

I am all for this being a NSFW subreddit, but we have to check that option in the subreddit settings. If /r/natureismetal isn't NSFW we have to be conservative about what we tag.

Bryce also said

> "us mods tag stuff once it hits like top 5 or so on the 'hot' page. so no worries there"

Which I do not appreciate. I think openly admitting to not doing a good job as a moderator makes the entire mod team look bad. Especially when phrased as if he is speaking for the whole team.

I don't want to make this sub an nsfw sub, because we do get a lot of sfw things as well. It would also affect our subscriber rate as well.

I would say put out an announcement that reminds people of tagging there posts.

Warning them that because of the uptick in these unmarked posts that they won't be tagged by us, they will be removed.

Maybe a steeper penalty will keep them honest

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from DagePartyM MN H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 4 months ago

I think quality is more important than subscribers. That's why you brought us on, because quality was dipping due to the increase in subscribers. This community would benefit from a NSFW sub.

I'd like to edit the sidebar to add those things in, but /u/manofthenightswatch removed configuration permissions for all of us. Would you add them back so I can do that?

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from DagePartyMN H via /r/natureismetal to DagePartysent 4 months ago

We should also consider a "no superimposed text" rule like /r/pics has. That would avoid any clickbait garbage that we usually get.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from tea_and_biologyMN H via /r/natureismetal to DagePartysent 4 months ago

On average, NSFW content makes up a very small minority of the content in this subreddit: tagging the entire subreddit as NSFW is therefore slightly disingenuous, and also, as mentioned, turns people away and prevents content hitting filtered r/all and other collating subs. Though true we aspire towards quality over quantity, we likewise don't want to throw a cloak over the entire subreddit and hide it from the rest of the site.

Going back to the original question: as far as what's considered NSFW, it's a grey area as with all things, and up to discretion - but as a rule-of-thumb if it looks like meat or there's only minor blood/viscera, it's fine

. If it's steps a teeny bit over the boundary and you see disembowelled organs, and flopping bits more recognisable than something that could be mistaken for generic steak, it's NSFW. The BBC would screen the former, but not the latter. So basically, if you think it would be cut from a nature documentary, NSFW it (as with the deer head n' spine). Otherwise reasonable shots of carcasses, blood and the rest is family friendly fun.

As with all things, favour leniency over knee-jerk tagging! If something is borderline and you're unsure, feel free to leave until a report comes in - often you find it won't, and therefore it was okay all along. Better to under-mod and respond to problems as they arise, rather than over-mod and be seen as knee-jerky, overbearing and dictatorial.

As submission content is entirely stochastic, we expect times when there's lots of NSFW content, and times when there's not. A recent bout of NSFW posts doesn't mean there's anything wrong with the current system or we're over/under-moderating - just coincidence. Tbh, we needn't do anything 'cept what we always do; if users don't tag things themselves, if we notice it, we do it for them. Ditto with reports. I wouldn't say it's such a problem that we need a stickied announcement or similar.

P.S. No superimposed text / clickbaity content is already covered by the 'no clickbait' / 'no shitpost' / 'spam' rules. I don't think it comes up often enough to worry about?

S'up brethren,

A sorry is in order - I left abruptly without letting y'all know I wouldn't be around for three weeks or so. Been abroad on expedition, tracking down animals and the like... But I'm back! Welcome to the new moderators! Hope you're settling in well. Seems there have been a few changes 'round here too - shall catch up and go through the mod mail backlog tomorrow morning. But anywho, just forwarding my apologies, and an eagerness to get my teeth stuck in again.

Take care and hope you all enjoyed your weekend!

Cheers,

tea_and_biology

P.S. The new seal image - does it not break our own rules on NSFW content? Metal as it is, the throat-rippin' image would be insta-masked as NSFW if it were a submission, but it's freely displayed on the subreddit. It could be argued NSFW posts are mostly to protect users from content that hits /r/all, and those who visit and subscribe to r/natureismetal itself expect gore, to whom it's fine. Counter-point is that not all subscribers view NSFW content, and if it's part of the subreddit style, it's kinda' unfair on them. Thoughts on our consistency? I guess we haven't had any complaints?

So before we run the poll, you said posts with 4,000 after I suggested 3,000 points to be where posts can't be reposted again.

I think even 3,000 is too high and I looked up how many posts fall into that r/natureismetal has had 106 posts hit 4,000 points and 165 hit 3,000. I think it'd be a lot better to include the 3,000 point posts, at least for the 2 week trial period if people vote to

What do you think?

That's 132 posts then, alright.

We'll see how that works combined with the 6 month repost rule

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[−] from YoSoyUnPayaso N M H via /r/natureismetal to DageParty sent 4 months ago

Sure, but there is a difference between allowing the users to leave suggestions and encouraging them to do so. While I understand that kforrest has the final say on this sub I believe that a good relationship between mods and users will lead to a better sub and community, and encouraging users to suggest rule or policy changes, and criticize mod practices, is one of the best ways to ensure a good relationship between the mods and the users. I also don't think that more questions in a poll will mean fewer users will fill it our per se (unless you put ridiculously many questions in). The /r/asoiaf theory poll had like 50 questions, or even more, and almost 10,000 users filled it out. I think that if we're going to make a poll on rule changes we might as well go a bit bigger than just ask the userbase about a single rule change.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from DageParty N M H via /r/natureismetal to YoSoyUnPayaso sent 4 months ago

They've got a much more active community than we do. The more questions you add, the longer it takes, the less people bother.

I'll mention that users should suggest rules in the post comments, but I'm not adding it to the poll.

I think we should make a rule that any post that has received 3,000 or more points in the past on /r/natureismetal should not be reposted again.

A lot of subs do this and it really helps the quality. It's too easy to repost things here.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[−] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to DageParty M H sent 4 months ago

I would rather increase the time limit on repost.

Remember that we are fast growing sub and that people have not seen everything.

It would limit severe reposting, but still allow for content to be recirculated for new subscribers

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[−] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to DageParty M H sent 4 months ago

It's not that hard for things to get 3k upvotes anymore.

We would be retiring a lot of content after a short while and would probably create a dead sub

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[−] from DageParty [M]N M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 4 months ago

Posts have to hit the top of /r/natureismetal to get to 3,000 upvotes which means they hit the front page of reddit

A big reason there are so many karma whores on the sub is because they can easily go to the top of all time and repost anything older than 3 months

There's constantly new stuff coming out to post on the subreddit, I don't think it would kill the sub. I think we should try it for a month and see how it works.

Tons of subs do this to increase quality. /r/gifs is a big one, because they also delete posts that have been popular (1500 points) anywhere on reddit within 2 weeks

Like, /u/SlimJones123 is a huge karma whore. He even said that he took it from an old post on this sub. That's bullshit and shouldn't be okay, the whole sub will just cycle every 3 months and stagnate.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from DageParty N M H via /r/natureismetal to DageParty sent 4 months ago

We could also let people vote if we should try this

The community constantly complains about natureismetal quality dropping, if we let them vote on this it will make the mods look good and let the community decide

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to DageParty M H sent 4 months ago

a month test is too long, if we even gonna do it, it be for a week. and keep in mind kforrest always gets final say.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to DageParty M H sent 4 months ago

Ok, make your case to the community and put it to a vote. Use a separate polling site to create the poll.

If it wins, we will make it a two week trial, and poll them again to see how they like the change. If after two weeks there is a 60% approval. Then it will stay

But it will be for 4000 upvotes and above , and we will extend the repost limit to 6 months.

Let's keep this sub on par for the thanksgiving weekend. Then we can have a conversation about any tweaks or changes to be made after the holiday.

I was testing out with the CSS trying to get better. I added the ban threats so people took NSFW tagging more seriously, but I don't think we should enforce them.

I tried to fix some stuff on the spritesheet as NSFW tags were looking off, but when I replaced the old one it disappeared and reverting it wouldn't bring anything back :/ So I did what I could and used the default naut sprites.

I'm in for a test sub, yeah. Want to get better so I can help out with CSS but I'm bumpy with it currently.

Hi,

So, I'm not sure if this is intentional or not but your "navigate" bar keeps collapsing if you don't hover over the very thin line. This makes it very hard to navigate by videos and stuff like that when looking for a source. Just an FYI.

We don't allow posts in the sidebar to be reposted right? I think that should go above the 3 month rule because it's listed in the sidebar.

I've seen mods remove posts like this before, but maybe we should have it written somewhere?

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from YoSoyUnPayaso N M H via /r/natureismetal to DageParty sent 4 months ago

Yeah I'd agree with removing those.

On the other hand did this post really need to be removed? Misidentifying something is not against the rules and I don't think we should remove posts for it.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from DageParty N M H via /r/natureismetal to YoSoyUnPayaso sent 4 months ago

Well the way I see it I think we should push for better title quality. Hummingbird is a gross misidentification.

I told him to repost with the fixed name, cause it should do a lot better that way and would be a better quality post.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

I'd say maybe it's more appropriate to flair it as "actually a Kingfisher" rather than completely removing it in such cases.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from DageParty N M H via /r/natureismetal to YoSoyUnPayaso sent 4 months ago

People on mobile don't see post flairs at all, it's not too much trouble to have them repost it.

I did flair it as Kingfisher too though. If it happens again I'll send a modmail about it first.

im not gonna fuck with shit till i get the talk. but I'm stoked i get to help this sub more then before. do we have some sort of mod discord or chat thing? cause mod mail is not the best place for organizing ourselves.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 4 months ago

We have not set up anything like that yet.

Luckily we hadn't cause the last mod that I had to remove was doxxing me, saying they were gonna stalk my Facebook lol

But yea, automod will get you a lot of mail traffic, not everything is a repost that gets reported as such.

When approving/ removing posts you have to think about the subject "what about this piece of nature makes it metal" "is it the defense mechanism of an animal or plant?" "Prey vs predator" "extreme weather conditions"

Sometimes because it's a person involved doesnt mean they are the facilitator of the violence, if they are the victim of animal or on a boat traversing a storm" .. the animal that attacks that's the metal part, it's the storm that's being brutal.

The rules are set as guidelines, but not so rigid that content becomes stale

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 4 months ago

ahh, so its like the invited people already have your trust in moderating the sub. and you expect us to act in ways we already do. wasn't sure if there where things i needed explained before i start curating a reputation. /s tho a side chat could be really useful, its easier to read and could help with messages that need to reach the whole mod team. hell even a private sub just for us. something thats just for us to talk to one and other. i wasn't saying this place was cluttered tho it is a little, but that mod mail is a weird system to use for talking to a team of people. i am but a newbie, so take my advice with a grain of salt. but it could be pretty useful

Dear natureismetal moderators,

I am not sure if a house cat hunting is metal enough. Also I see that in the description it mention "wild animals". The only reason why I think this would fit is the run of desperation from the mouse which is unfortunately useless:

Most of the time they aren't reposts but the automod sees the word "repost" and complains about it. Most of the time it's just people in the community who keep saying "repost" without really getting what a repost is.

We should have an automod that deletes the post if it's on NiM within the allotted time. Or some awareness as to what reposts are.

Hi there /r/natureismetal mods,

Your subreddit has been chosen as a trending subreddit for today! Your subreddit will be featured along with a few others on the front page. You can see the comments thread here: /r/trendingsubreddits/comments/5bzyp7/trending_subreddits_for_20161109_rthe_donald/

What this means:

- You should probably expect more traffic today. You might want to keep a closer eye on moderation than usual.
- Your subreddit has been noticed! Hopefully you feel that's a good thing. If you don't, you can prevent this from happening again by disabling "allow this subreddit to be shown in the default set" in your subreddit settings.
- If you'd like, folks might be discussing your subreddit in the link above. Feel free to interact with them.

Congratulations, mods!

-Your friendly trending bot, made by your friends at reddit.

Hey dudes/dudettes not sure, anyways we're at 195k subs right now we'll probably hit 200k before the end of the weekend. We should probably make a post about it, normally dublzz would lol.

Any ideas?

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[−] from tea_and_biology N M H via /r/natureismetal to SaladFury sent 5 months ago

Hmmm, I was thinking along the lines of having some sort of celebration - maybe teaming up with r/GifSound or something and temporarily allowing shitposts where peeps link to GIFs / videos dubbed/synced with metal music (reposts allowed if they do). Best, most upvoted sync wins a competition or summit' and enters a hall of fame. Bit out there, but think it could be fun and stirs up a lot of activity.

I could throw together an announcement video and everything... Though, yeah, 200k is coming a lot sooner than expected! (mabes has something to do with the new subscribe banner?!)

And in the announcement sticky, rehash the old 'trusted user' stuff as before.

Any thoughts? Gotta' celebrate somehow!

It's a bit knee-jerky, at the moment - though we try and review and re-approve everything it removes erroneously. It was set up to remove spam subreddit advertising and 'low effort comments' ages and ages ago (which is probs what happened here, with the r/ link, not recognising there was a genuine comment), and having recently tried to clean it up and fix, the bot has become a bit too tenacious... !

Will fiddle.

Yeah, checking the log it was set up by Dublzz a while back - perhaps we were inundated with spam advertising for a while or something, and being a subordinate mod just went along with prior rules. Something to look into changing, perhaps!

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 5 months ago

It's not that he was using alt accounts to upvote. He was removing posts so his alt accounts like --zach-- could be boosted to the front page on a daily basis. We had problems with him doing something similar before. People noticed he was rigging the sub, and was asked to stop. He continued to under the justification that we were getting lots of subscribers. I don't want to cheat the community just cause we get higher numbers, that's not what we are about

But he has his knockoff /r/natureisfuckinglit, where he can rig the posts to his hearts content

That was me! Your posting history has all the hallmarks of a shill spam account: here to simply post links to stolen Youtube content (on obscure channels shortly after posting) to farm views, and spam sites - many of your previous submissions, for example, link to channels that have been terminated. Your most recent submission, to /r/documentaries, is pure spam. As per site-wide rules, the stuff you post runs afoul of the sites content policy, and as a pre-emptive measure to prevent further submissions here, I removed you.

I'd check out Reddit's content policy for guidelines on what is and isn't welcome on Reddit. If you're here with good intentions for use of the site, I'm sorry, and you're welcome to appeal providing you can show you're a genuine user.

Hmmm, I've tried but can't seem to reproduce the issue. Does a similar problem arise if you visit r/naut (we use their CSS template)? Otherwise, not sure what else to do - the CSS currently active is several months old, and if it wasn't a problem back then, nothing on our end has changed to therefore cause the issue - perhaps an RES update or similar has affected things for some but not all users or summit' (I'm no IT expert! Perhaps r/Enhancement might clarify?). Sorry couldn't be of more help!

I don't actually know how to do the sidebar but I think we should change the baiting/feeding rule. It restricts posts like this one that I think fit well in our sub and are often filmed in higher quality and stuff.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from tea_and_biology N M H via /r/natureismetal to SaladFury sent 5 months ago

I've always interpreted the sidebar asmeaning 'feeding/baiting' live animals to one another (throwing a live mouse into a snake's tank etc.), and therefore considered posts about animals being fed other things as fine - the spirit of the rule is to prevent the promotion of unnecessary animal cruelty after all, and feeding a tiger a dead cow or something doesn't run afoul of that. But yeah, could do with better clarification! Something like:

"Posts of people using live animals as food or bait are no longer allowed, let's keep content as natural as possible."

Hey all,

Just as an FYI, I cleaned up the automoderator and added a few additional filters removing mobile links and non-direct image links (asking users to repost with links everyone can use), and likewise swapped the old 'manually set' subreddit advertising removal code with an automatic one. Watching its performance atm, and tweaking as necessary - but it should work better!

Also, noticed posts I mark NSFW seem to have their NSFW status removed after a while (i.e. check out the log on the whale and cat post) and it needs redoing. Is it just me or is there something up?

Hey all,

What do you think about inviting /u/ibarabi to the moderator team? Mention this as they've just been in touch with me (and maybe yourselves?) about potentially getting involved and, checking out their profile, seem to be an all-round good egg, and very active in /r/natureismetal.

Likewise /u/jonosvision (#1 trusted user) and /u/YoSoyUnPayaso (very active, and lots of biology knowledge) are good contributors as well. Any thoughts?

In other news, just as an FYI, I've been banning lots of shill spam accounts recently; we seem to have been inundated with 'em, promoting links to Youtube channels that host stolen content. For reference, an idea of the type of stuff they post can be found by following the links in their profiles listed here, but yeah, keep your eyes peeled!

When Irababi originally contacted us, he had never even made a post or comment in this sub. Not sure if that's changed.

Jonovision has a serious dedication to the sub, same with Brycewilliam. As long as we helped them see what we look for as a mod on this sub, they would be really helpful.

I'm good with banning spam accounts

Oui! I send a PM to every single user that's involved with any moderation I get up to, including the shill accounts. I trialled making it a public comment in the thread, but they ended up clogging my entire profile history... eek!

Also fair, on /u/ibarabi . Just passing the message on! They're keen, in any case. I really enjoy /u/BryceWilliam 's enthusiasm and activity, though his writing could do with a little polish if moderating, whereas /u/jonosvision hits all the right spots. Up to y'all who to invite; but it'd be nice to have an extra pair of hands anywho.

As an FYI, been cleaning up a few odd bits of the wiki/rules etc., and also removed dublzz's trusted user sticky as we can no longer edit it to update. With permission, was going to immediately replace with something pretty similar, but then it struck me we're projected to hit 200,000 subs by December and thought we could do a 'Countdown to 200,000' sticky instead - same content as before, about needing extra eyes n' ears to help keep on top of things and the benefits of flair etc., but thought it'd be cool if, like, something happened when we hit 200k. Not sure what though. Any ideas? New subreddit design / features (happy to work on)?

I have messaged /u/kforrest59 several times over the past week. He has ignored my question as to why I was removed from the moderation team. Now I even have members of the community messaging me to ask why I am no longer a moderator. I have no reason to give them.

Kyle, I messaged you privately as to not bring attention to you ignoring my messages. You are active and I know you read them. That you cannot give a reason for why I was removed is disappointing.

To the rest of the moderators, I was suspended for a week from Reddit, two weeks ago. I was suspended because the admins were told that another account was spamming the website and that I controlled that account. The accuser even tried to message our modteam a few weeks ago before he managed to have the admins ban that account and give mine a 7 day suspension. That week I was busy with university, so I did not bother to appeal such a short suspension. I could not message anyone, but if I could I would have alerted the modteam that I would not be active for a week.

On the last day of my suspension I was removed as a moderator. I asked Kyle his reasoning, privately. He gave none. He did respond, saying that he saw I was suspended for a week, but this is not a reason. I was not messaged before the removal, else I would have created a throwaway to respond.

If anyone on the moderator team can give some insight into why I was removed I would appreciate it. I put so much time into this subreddit as you all know. Several hours daily spent improving it. To remove me because I was inactive for a week makes no sense.

Thank you for reading. I hope one of you respond. And Kyle, I will be messaging you on Facebook. Hopefully you will respond there.

Regardless, that's still abusing moderator tools for vote manipulation - artificially prioritising some user content over others in order to get around the site algorithms - which is a big reddit-wide no-no. Though your intentions may have been good for the subreddit, it is still the case that you were breaking major rules (rather cleverly, I might say, but still), and as a moderator you should be more than aware of that, and be held to a higher standard. It isn't for us to decide which posts reach the top, that is for the users and their upvotes; a process which forms the very foundation of what reddit is about.

I recall there was also some minor things with stickying non-moderator comments for unfair visibility/karma, selectively applying rules to some users and not others, and so on and so forth - which fed this feeling you were generally single-handedly running the subreddit as you saw fit, rather than as a collective team process.

Don't get me wrong, from my perspective, you've done excellent work promoting the place and bringing the standard and quality of content up. It was felt, however, that we couldn't have a moderator that doesn't abide by some fundamental principles and the site and subreddit's own rules - which, by the way, was also very much noticed by many of the users.

At least, I think that's the gist, coming from a non-partial individual who has no connection to y'all IRL. I hope that clarifies?!

tea_and_biology, please remember that I am not new to Reddit. I have moderated several communities before NatureIsMetal and personally contacted you to become a moderator. I have used the site longer than you and am familiar with its rules. Using moderator tools to bump posts does not break them.

Several subreddits that I have been a part of do this. They still do this, and it is a proven method. I want you to do this:

Go to http://redditmetrics.com/r/natureismetal and look at the growth rate.

63rd fastest growing of the last 3 months.
62nd of the last 30 days.
523,993rd of the last week.

Why do you think that might be? That the subreddit stopped growing the same week I was removed?

All of the growth we have had over the past 3 months was my doing. My method did that.

Do not act like you know how to run a subreddit after having been a moderator for 28 days. I see you leveraged your 8-day experience into becoming a moderator on /r/awwducational too. Congratulations.

What I did was not the reason for the suspension. It does not break Reddit rules, as moderators are allowed to moderate their communities in any way they see fit.

If you would look at the moderation log from before you were added you will see that for nearly three months I was the only active moderator. I brought you on. I convinced everyone that you would be a good fit and I regret that.

The fact that only a few days after you were added you began to undo all of the actions I did daily showed that you should not have been added. You even tried to complain to a moderator above me, which is pathetic. If you have a problem you speak to the person you have a problem with.

I understand that I have been removed and see that no one intends to give me a good reason. If it was because I was suspended, I now am not. If it was because I broke Reddit rules, I did not. If it was because you just don't want me to be part of the subreddit, Kyle, that's fine. Say it instead of hiding.

I am glad to see the immense effort I put into this subreddit is worth nothing. Weeks of work refining AutoModerator, CSS, flairs, upkeeping reports, communicating with the community. And removed without notice.

Really great. Good luck with the sub.

> The fact that only a few days after you were added you began to undo all of the actions I did daily showed that you should not have been added. You even tried to complain to a moderator above me, which is pathetic. If you have a problem you speak to the person you have a problem with.

I did; you ignored said messages, even those over mod mail for all to see. Communication and action likewise goes both ways, m'dear; you undid moderation by myself which was completely in compliance with the rules as set down in the sidebar, without any explanation, whilst at the same time boosting rule-breaking submissions yourself. A simple message that you were rigging the front page in order to increase viewership would have sufficed. Alas, you just boot me out without a word, just whilst I try to do the right thing and run the subreddit as per the very guidelines yourself and the rest of the mod team have set out. Apparently you don't have time for that - very simple team communication - and instead run the whole thing as a one man show. Speak to the person you have a problem with, 'innit.

With regards to communication, the only thing here that's pathetic is not liking the taste of your own medicine.

In any case, even if frequently removing dozens of completely legitimate posts from the subreddits' front page in order to artificially bump new threads by specific users (who are always the same, and were incidentally likewise suspended) to the top isn't strictly against site-wide rules (the reddit admin I mentioned this to didn't seem to agree; though as mentioned you were clever about exploiting loopholes), it's still very poor reddiquette and, as noted, was commented on by a number of subscribers. We're held to a higher standard and should behave accordingly. Claiming excellent trending figures as a positive following the methods you used to achieve them is no different in principle than someone exclaiming 'look at all my karma!' by a user using alt accounts to self-upvote (or in your case, stickying your own non-mod comments to highlight them), despite in your case tip-toeing 'round loopholes. Yay, good for you, but it doesn't make it right - treading on a large number of users for the benefit of a select few, and yourself.

Be that as it may, /u/kforrest59 has made their decision and it's up to them what happens. If there is a disagreement with how I handled the situation, feel free to boot me out or do whatever. I'm more than content leaving, knowing what little I did with regards to this particular circumstance was the right thing, and judging from post comments and personal PMs, how pleasant my moderation has been. Otherwise, on this note:

> I am glad to see the immense effort I put into this subreddit is worth nothing.

Exactly. As it is for all of us. None of the effort we put into reddit is worth anything but meaningless points, the occasional thank you and our own sense of self-satisfaction at a job well done. Nobody denies nor doesn't appreciate the time you've dedicated to /r/natureismetal, for which we, the subscribers, are grateful. It's regrettable a more germane goodbye wasn't provided. Otherwise, sorry for being blunt, but what else do you want? It's only reddit.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz N M H via /r/natureismetal to tea_and_biology sent 5 months ago

The "moderation" you did was approving all the links I removed. I never boosted rule-breaking submissions and you wouldn't be able t find an example of that if you tried. I set the rules and am aware of what breaks them.

I did send a message about the method I was using, no one ever replied to it.

I also do not know what you mean when you say a number of subscribers commented on it. In the three months I was with the subreddit no one ever mentioned it. So unless you prompted them by telling users how the posts were boosted, no one ever did take issue with it.

Any kind of post that mentions a benchmark in the title makes users aware of the subscription numbers. Users that see this on /r/all realize that they are not yet subscribed and thus do, which makes it the most effective method to gain subscribers.

You keep saying loopholes, but I was very clearly doing this and did not hide it from the team. There is no way to hide this action.

It is only something that I put effort into. You can try to devalue anything, but the time and creativity I put into this subreddit made it something I was proud of. Have a nice day.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from tea_and_biology N M H via /r/natureismetal to dublzz sent 5 months ago

On the contrary, it was removing rule-breaking reposts you had erroneously approved, undoing action you took against non-rule-breaking threads (independent of any page manipulation) and the like, blah blah blah, but that's not interesting (anyone can check the log to see this was the case) and there's no point continuing this exchange endlessly.

All I'll say is that I gave you the benefit of the doubt in the above exchange when you say you weren't breaking any site rules, but I've confirmed with umbrae (admin) that (paraphrasing) 'users attempting to game a subreddit into the trending list, and otherwise manipulating traffic for upvotes or exposure, will be banned'. As an FYI, as you mention you're doing it elsewhere - be careful!

Also users do realise when their posts have been removed without explanation and, clearly, do get upset/annoyed/frustrated by it - otherwise they wouldn't have been in touch (and pointed it out!). Again, something to be wary of!

Anywho, take care and all the best!

Hey! If it doesn't show up in the 'other discussions' tab at the top of the post, I usually:

1) Reverse image search using karmadecay.com

2) Manually search the subreddit with keywords

3) Google reverse image search the image, using 'reddit' as the key word

In this instance, #3 worked and I found this, which is literally just at the three months cut-off point for reposts! Otherwise, it's kinda' difficult to tell and the odd one slips through.

Check out this as an example - at the top, above the title, you'll see a 'comments' tab, followed by 'other discussions (13)' and 'show images (10)'. The 'other discussions' tab only appears if there are actually other posts with the same URL elsewhere on reddit, and it's sometimes useful. But if someone has reuploaded an image to imgur, or has a different URL, or is uploading directly to reddit, it's not so useful. But if it pops up, always worth a check!

Who says you can't pet your fish

Well according to a thread in /r/NatureIsMetal the other day, piranha swarming/feeding-frenzy behavior is one only demonstrated when they're severely starved. When well fed, they typically only like to pick on smaller sick and injured fish. Apparently they're even scared of and tend to avoid/swim away from larger creatures like humans, because they don't wanna mess with us and risk injury.

One person even posted and anecdote of how they worked at a pet store and had to clean the piranha tank by sticking their arm inside the tank while the fish were still swimming in there, and they said the piranha actually seemed timid around the human arm and would swim to the other side of the tank.

So while I wouldn't recommend it, but trying to put a piranha would probably go just as well as trying to feed most other fish: They'd just freak out and swim away from you. However, unlike most other fish, could bite back if you're successful in touching them, so I'd still avoid it if possible. And of course I'm not an expert, and even though I read all this stuff on the internet so it must be absolutely $100% true, take these second-hand anecdotes with several grains of salt.

On the sidebar under top ten most brutal, #7 says "Sparrow drowns magpie".

On YouTube, the video is titled "Sparrow hawk drowns magpie"...

Watching the video, the animal in question is definitely NOT a sparrow. I was quite disappointed, since a sparrow drowning a magpie is WAY more brutal than a sparrow hawk drowning a magpie...

Perhaps change that hyperlink to say "sparrow hawk", instead of "sparrow"?

Hello,

I believe my post has been hidden by a mod on your subreddit:

https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/58u992/you_think_piranhas_are_terrifying_meet_the/

It does not show up on any page of the new or hot sections of the subreddit despite it being only about 4ish hours old. I didn't receive any notice nor any explanation for this action. I don't think it is breaking any of the rules is it? I just want a little explanation as to what is going on here.

Thanks!

Hey guys,

I saw that a gif of one of our videos (lion sneaks up on a leopard) was posted to this subreddit. We're really stoked that so many people enjoyed it! Anyway, wanted to let you know that we (mostly Matt) have been long time lurkers of r/natureismetal.

We have this account now, is there anything we need to do to get verified? Is it against subreddit rules for us to comment/post, considering we run a YouTube channel and website focused on this type of content?

Let us know!

Hey! Welcome to Reddit!

Your best bet would be to check out these guidelines that are enforced site-wide, regarding the do's-and-don'ts when it comes to your questions. In short though; you're more than welcome to share and comment on content (even your own) here, but generally try to be careful about it, otherwise you're likely to run afoul of site-wide rules on spam. As a rule-of-thumb, less than 10% of your posting and conversation should link to your own channel/website - but yeah, you're otherwise free to take part as you please!

Cheers,

tea_and_biology

so I dont know if you know this,

but Dublzz account was suspended, he was using alt accounts to post with and using mod privileges to make sure they got to the very top.

so as much work as he did for us, hes gone now.

he did try to make it a one man show, but its back to a cohesive team that can collaborate rather than one who dictates.

side note, i created a new sub called /r/internetslueths today.

if anybody would like to help me get that off the ground i would really appreciate it

I know it's meta, but is there any way pets can be voted on to be removed from acceptable content here?

Pets are an unnaturally occurring phenomenon in nature, and to a lesser extent a product of human involvement.

Far too many posts with people's pet's getting messed up that end up directly involving humans or are a product of human's negligence. We see less nature and more "TIFU". These posts as an aside usually end up in flame wars over how humane or natural they are anyways, and it would serve a bigger cause in purifying the content to strictly naturally occurring scenarios and content.

Thanks all.

I dont really see them on the sub, is that something you guys tolerate or do you want to keep it as a link only sub?

I was thinking of making a post titled something like "What are your favorite posts displaying weaker animals fighting back and winning?" Not well worded at all I gotta work on that part but, would that post be okay or would it be annoying?

We try to verify degree flairs so users know that if they see a user comment that has one the information is reliable.

If you already have one of these flairs in /r/askscience or /r/science and can show it to us this also works.

[−] from [deleted] to /r/natureismetal sent 6 months ago

Hello fellow mods,

this morning i woke up to some interesting messages. i not going to put anyone specific on blast, Im just going to address the problems and from here forward know that Im looking to make sure that these changes are met and to know where we all stand in this.

i received several messages by mods that they believe there is mod abuse and upvote manipulation happening. this will stop immediately. all content is to stay on the board unless it violates sub rules or has been reposted within the 3 month period.

content is to not be removed otherwise. reports have been sent to me that there are posts being removed in order to bolster there own or anothers account post to reap karma.

this is Natureismetal, and just like nature, the strong post will thrive on there own, we dont need to cull content to make another post shine. thats some bullshit right there.

another thing we will not do, distinguish non moderating comments or posts. if you want to comment on a post, go ahead, just dont sticky it to reap comment karma. the only reason a comment should be stickied is when you are addressing as a mod concerning rules or clarfication of rules in a post.

lastly i think some people are concerned with what they are doing on this team, how they contribute, when this was first created that was clear, but the team has changed, and so to reclarify

- -kforrest: mod que, charitable acts for sub, sub rules, final decisions
- -manofthenightswatch- mod que, CSS and formatting
- -saladfury- mod que, (future contributions and responsibilites pending)
- -dublzz- mod que, CSS formatting, auto mod tinkerer, metric analist, flair quatermaster
- -misseray- mod que, my assisstant
- -tea_and_biology- mod que, resident zoologist, drops knowledge bombs everybody does mod que, myself included, the auto mod has made that almost non existent, but it doesn't catch everything, it does make mistakes, and those mistakes need a human to correct.

hopefully this helps everybody understand what they do, why they are here. if you feel that there is something that you can do but are not assigned, feel free to let everybody know and we will give you a shot to do it.

we dont need toe stepping or decisiveness between us right now. we are one of the fastest growing and most liked subs right now. lets not break ourselves and destroy this thing we helped build (i know its reddit, imaginary points), but still. we will get 200k followers by end of year, and thats big.

i hate having to address the mod team like this, we're adults, but this needed to nipped in the bud.

let me know of any questions or concerns

but are we all clear?

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz [M]N M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 6 months ago

kforrest you are right. We don't need toe stepping.

The reason we have grown so quickly in the past three months is because of the measures I have been enacting. I wrote around a month or two ago about how us having a post on the front page is essential to gaining subscribers. Naturally we would get one a few times a week, and I set out to make that daily.

There is a reason we are the 3rd fastest growing non-default of the past month. And why we have gained 30,000 subscribers in that period, faster than ever before. We are now the top nature subreddit, and top animal subreddit (not including /r/cats).

Every day I find the best post that has been recently submitted that I feel represents the quality of our subreddit and would do well. I remove all of the top posts that are over 6 hours old; this pushes the new content to the top. It directs viewers on the subreddit to fresh content. This content, because it is seen so early, is chosen by the Reddit algorithm to reach the front page. Popular posts that are newer will get priority. This is how we reach the front page of /r/all almost daily.

This is not vote manipulation and does not break any of Reddit's rules. Vote manipulation is voting with multiple accounts to try and boost a post. Moderators are allowed to run their subreddit in any way they see fit and my method has proven to be most effective. At this rate we will hit 200k in the next 30 days.

/u/tea_and_biology , I brought you on as a moderator. No one else. I looked into your history, liked the quality of the comments you posted, and in the interest of making our subreddit a more science-focused one like /r/science or /r/askscience wanted to bring on more formally educated users. I advocated for you and think you make a good part of the subreddit, but ask that you respect the way we run things.

I do not appreciate you going behind my back to complain about the way I run the subreddit. I do not post stickied comments for karma, every comment I post is educational and has to do with the content to improve the quality of the subreddit. Educating on top of entertainment is how we advance the subreddit from gore-watching to a BBC-nature-show equivalent. This is what makes us likely to become a default in the future. I encourage you to do the same, because it is how we run the subreddit. I do not appreciate you undoing the work we have done. The reason we do not have a post in the top 100 of /r/all at the moment is because of your interference.

If you do not like the way I run the subreddit you take it up with me. It is actively moderating the subreddit to create a better algorithm that works for Reddit as a whole. Every post removed to show newer posts is reinstated, never permanently removed. I created the 3 month repost rule, I know which posts violate our subreddit rules.

If you do not like my moderation style I would suggest you leave, because it does a whole lot more for the subreddit to continue this method than to have a moderator actively undermine it.

Also, /u/misserray , if you remember the Reddit alien contest you held a while back, I created a new /r/natureismetal alien from this sketch by /u/nyroc128 .

I created the rough base in Photoshop and refined in Illustrator, the new Snoo looks like this:

High-res version of the new Snoo: http://i.imgur.com/yw7Joxp.png

Subreddit header: http://imgur.com/a/GPdlO

The NSFW thumbnail used to be "18+", but as that isn't how we use the NSFW tag on this subreddit, I created a new thumbnail: http://i.imgur.com/fL2D6Pp.png

It is applied on both the desktop and mobile versions of Reddit now. I think we should announce it soon to give credit to /u/nyroc128 for his design idea.

Hey /u/dublzz ,

Is there a reason for the mass removals and re-approvals (and later removals) for a whole loada' posts on the subreddit today? Just looking at the moderation log, it's not clear what's going on. Having checked each one myself, via karmadecay and elsewhere, the vast majority aren't reposts and otherwise all abide by the rules. Anything up?

Also, generally to everyone, I always PM peeps r.e. their post removals etc. - judging by the lack of mod comments in many other removed threads, presumably many of you do the same quite often (?). Shall we instead make it standard practice to post notices to the OP in the threads themselves, so that at least we can all check why each other removed them?

Cheers all!

Hey Mods,

I posted this image the other day (Kangaroo killed by mistimed jump.

http://i.imgur.com/7a2YAAo.jpg

Just wondering what your thoughts are on this image belonging to this Subreddit?

A few people have commented on my post saying that they don't feel like it's the correct subreddit, just hoping you wouldn't mind commenting on the photo clearing up some of the confusion this photo has caused. I'm happy to take it down if you feel it doesn't belong on this sub.

Thanks for your work!

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from tea_and_biology N M H via /r/natureismetal to insextion sent 6 months ago

Hey insextion,

Your post was approved by another more senior mod, though having just had a wee poke around in the comments - I understand where those arguments are coming from, and I'm rather sympathetic. This is nature is metal, after all - which isn't synonymous with dead animal snaps, or animals suffering at the hands of artificial situations. The existing 'no humans' rule already covers this to a certain extent, but perhaps isn't comprehensive or clear enough to include more indirect 'human environmental situations' (it focuses more on humans being the focus of the content, or directly setting up cruelty), and it's certainly something the moderator team can review and clarify as necessary. If you ever have doubt, feel free to drop a message and we'll have a chat. Thanks for bringing it up!

In light of this, I'll remove your 'borderline' post for being a tad too human-centric, though I apologise for the existing rules in the sidebar perhaps not being too clear cut on this point. Don't let this discourage you however, and please feel free to continue to contribute to the subreddit!

Take care and all the best,

tea_and_biology

Hi there, we mainly give flair for users with degrees in natural sciences like biology. On /r/NatureIsMetal there is not much application for a computer science degree.

We do not want to clutter the subreddit with flair for every degree, only those applicable to the content of the subreddit.

Hey lovely mods.

Not only is this a really click bait title, but I'm 99% sure the account and the two commenters (at this moment) are spam accounts. The commenting accounts are both 4 months with 0 karma and they speak like bots. The account that posted it also looks like your typical spam account with the barely literate useless comments. I think it's one of those accounts trying to get enough karma to be sold.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[−] from dublzz N M H via /r/natureismetal to PantherophisNiger sent 6 months ago

We've recently introduced them to increase the quality of the subreddit. Wildlife conservation is appropriate for a flair on /r/NatureIsMetal.

Would you mind showing us some information that establishes your claim? This can be a photo of your diploma or course registration, a business card, a verifiable email address, or some other identification.

We try to verify degree flairs so users know that if they see a user comment that has one the information is reliable. If you already have one of these flairs in /r/askscience or /r/science and can show it this also works.

Your flair once confirmed will appear as "Wildlife Conservation | BS".

Hey, I wanna start by saying this one of my favorite subreddits. I earned a Bachelor of Science with a focus in Ecology from The Evergreen State College in 2011. I worked with the USFWS during two summers while in college, then immediately after college became a field biologist for a company called West Fork Environmental. I worked there for four years with the bulk of my work doing field surveys for various fish, amphibians, and birds. A year ago I began working as a restoration ecologist in Portland, OR. I've seen some crazy shit workin' in the woods for so long, and indeed nature is metal as fuck.

We try to verify degree flairs so users know that if they see a user comment that has

If you already have one of these flairs in /r/askscience or /r/science and can show it this also works.

/u/ibarabi you need to stop. That isn't even a rule. Spamming us with links that do not break our rules only wastes our time.

You have sent us at least four links that you thought should be removed for some of the most subjective reasons that we have disagreed with.

From now on please only send a link if it is a repost or breaks the human interaction rule. And stop putting your removal reason in the the subject, just put it in the main text.

Sure thing, I really didn't mean to be spammy, I really thought those posts did violate rules and was asking for the Mod teams discretion and assistance in understanding the rules. You guys did remove at least 50% or so of the one's I sent, I believe. Either way, I now have a clear idea of the type of posts that should be removable. Thanks again.

Hi /u/tea_and_biology ,

We at /r/NatureIsMetal have noticed the quality and care put into your comments. It is clear you have a profound love of nature.

You are a Trusted User in our subreddit, likely because you contributed to maintaining subreddit quality in some way.

Our community has been growing at a much faster rate recently, so we are reaching out to a few community members to gauge interest in an invite to join our team. We want to expand and include qualified users that will improve the community.

Would you be interested in joining /r/NatureIsMetal as a moderator?

Also, I'm currently completing a DPhil in Zoology (we use a funny name for our PhDs), and a reflection of that won't be too shabby, I suppose?

You have post permissions on the subreddit now. This means you can use the approve, remove, spam, distinguish, sticky, nsfw, set suggested sort, and contest mode buttons. This permission covers the content moderation duties of being a moderator.

Familiarize yourself with our rules, no feeding videos, no animal cruelty, no human interaction (posts with people in them are allowed if the people are not the focus). We remove reposted content if it has been posted within three months. Then there are rules for low-quality content, inappropriate content, and non-descriptive titles. Use your best judgement.

I'll give you a 'Zoology | PhD' flair, users will understand that easier than DPhil.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[−] from ibarabi N M H via /r/natureismetal to dublzz sent 6 months ago

I love nature and I love metal. I love the content that /r/NatureIsMetal has been propagating to the masses recently and have learned the Metal side of Nature through side. I've always found videos of predator vs prey, natural landscapes enjoyable to watch. Even better when it has been reduced to a gif to gets things moving along better. Like this one I recently saw, made be pucker up, so to speak. In addition, I would like to maintain the level of quality that has been my first impression of /r/NatureIsMetal and want to help the Mod team in keeping the vision of the subreddit true to its Nature, pun intended. I can help with what is needed for the sub to continue to grow, entertain and educate. I'm consistent, a team player and enjoy Reddit in general. Please let me know if you would like to know more.

Thanks again ibarabi

Some questions, (and other mods feel free to chime in)

We are wondering why you have never posted to the subreddit previously. How do you feel you qualify as a moderator without having participated in the content of the subreddit?

Just curious, is English a second language of yours, and in which country are you based?

Do you have any formal education in natural sciences like biology or earth studies?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from ibarabi N M H via /r/natureismetal to dublzz sent 6 months ago

I have never posted to /r/NatureIsMetal, I just learned about your subreddit this past week with the trio of post that hit /r/all/ Stone Avalanche

, Bearded Firewarm, and Penguin eaten alive. I then proceed to dive into the subreddit content, just as a lurker really, this past week alone.

In terms of feeling qualified as a moderator, I'm currently a Moderator in other subreddit and would maintain the /r/NatureIsMetal subreddit rules and policies, which I know how to do and are aware of them as you have them posted. Which I think you guys have done a great job in outlining those rules and provide great clairity, i.e. No clickbait titles, also non-animal content.

I am from the United States of America, my first Language is English and I am fluent as such. I do speak Arabic as a second language.

I have a formal background in Earth Studies, in the Subject of Geography and specialize in Digital Mapping (GIS)

[–] from dublzz N M H via /r/natureismetal to ibarabi sent 6 months ago

While it is notable that you moderate two default subreddits and that comes with experience, we would rather you participate in the subreddit before considering you for a position on the moderator team. Post a few times, participate in discussion, try to earn the Trusted User flair. Prove to us that you actually care about the subreddit.

You say that you are fluent in English, so if I may, allow me to point out the grammatical errors in your last message:

> "the trio of post" should be "trio of posts"
>
> "Bearded Firewarm" should be "Bearded Fireworm" as it was in the post title.
>
> "I then proceed to dive" should be "I then proceeded to dive"
>
> "I'm currently a Moderator in other subreddit" should be "I'm currently a Moderator in other subreddits"
> "which I know how to do and are aware of them" should be "which I know how to do and am aware of them," since it should be able to read as, "which I am aware of". Though the entire framing of the sentence is awkward.

I do not point these out mockingly, but because being fluent in a language means you know the grammatical rules of it and part of representing the quality of a subreddit means speaking well.

If you have an interest in joining our team please engage yourself further in our community to familiarize yourself. Simply having seen three posts over the past week is not enough to understand the culture of our subreddit.

You seem like a good user and the modteam has discussed this at length, but for now we do not have reason enough to add you as a moderator.

I had a thought, and by no means is it needed now but that might change as we get more well known and more posts in /all. but many subs have that thing where you can't downvote unless your subscribed. it might be a good idea to keep that in mind for the future if 'animal lovers' come here all up in arms and offended. tho as I said, we might not ever have to deal with that.

heres hoping I'm just some paranoid guy.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

That goes only as far as CSS. I've thought of it too, but the majority of downvotes will come from people seeing posts on /r/all.

Individual CSS won't apply on /r/all, on mobile, on apps, and even on desktops it's easy to turn CSS off with RES.

It's an effective technique to make your subreddit downvote-free from those subscribed, maybe making it more positive overall, but not to keep outsiders from voting.

/u/ibarabi wants to be a moderator.

We can discuss it here without replying to the modmail he sent.

Of course if modded, he will be able to read this conversation.

We have been discussing adding more moderators recently. The system in place is the Trusted User flair, and many users have acted to report reposts and rule violations. I have not seen one that stands out especially well yet.

As we have grown by such a huge amount in two weeks, it may be time to add a moderator.

Looking through his history he has never posted to /r/NatureIsMetal.

He has been a user for three years and moderates two subreddits, /r/TodayILearned and /r/DataIsBeautiful both of which are defaults.

With only two subreddits it is unlikely he is a sub collector (something seen often on /r/needamod, a person that joins subreddits just to be a mod on them and do no work)

Having never participated in /r/NatureIsMetal is concerning though, given his sudden interest in modding.

He has over 220,000 link karma, so one would think he would have posted at least once to the subreddit he wants to mod.

He is American-based and seems to like many different sports.

He does post often in the subreddits he moderates, but also in most default subreddits.

He is most active from 9 to 12PM EST. This does not necessarily mean he is in the EST time zone but makes it likely.

He is an active user, posting at least daily.

I see very little interest in nature from his posting history, he is far more interested in sports and news.

Overall he seems like a good, active user. He moderates two default subreddits so is likely experienced in dealing with large numbers of posts. He has moderated TIL for two years, it became a default three years earlier. He has moderated DataIsBeautiful for only 1 month, it became a default two years ago.

I assume the mod teams of both of those subreddits have vetted him thoroughly already, but it is wise to ask him questions about why he wants to be a mod here and if he has ideas to improve the subreddit.

With no previous contribution to /r/NatureIsMetal there is little to judge him on. We do want moderators interested in content of the subreddit.

In the end it is /u/kforrest59 's decision. There are pros and cons to adding him over choosing from our community.

kforrest, opinions?

I haven't actually. But I could if it'd make you happy!

/u/love_the_heat

First impressions, sub collector. No one has time to mod 87 subreddits well. Moderates 4 defaults (or did, because /r/bestof isn't anymore).

He mods /r/EternityClub, which is the definition of a subreddit full of karma whores. They auto add anyone that has hit the front page, I was added a few months ago.

32 of the subreddits he moderates have hit 10,000 subs. No way he has time to commit to all of them.

2.2 Million link karma. This means he cares about points mainly. I've been on the site for four years and am around 175k, you don't get to a million without reposting like crazy.

He's posted once to the subreddit and it's not even a good post.

Hard no from me.

He wants to be a mod so he can add it to his collection.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to dublzz M H sent 6 months ago

Cool thanks for the break down.

I'll go with a no then as well.

We want to give priority to to people who are active in this community.

Probably best to put a open notice in the sub looking for mods from the community, then we vet best candidates. And pick 2 to keep up with all future traffic.

Oh yea /u/dublzz , pm me what you got on me, this should be fun/scary

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz [M]N M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 6 months ago

So my fear with putting out a notice looking for mods is that it draws out people who don't truly care. We have lots of submitters that are very active, but would be terrible mods. Putting a call for that out would lead to them applying no doubt.

And then we would turn them down, which could lead to some of our top submitters leaving the subreddit because they don't feel valued or are insulted we rejected them.

The preferred method to find moderators is to watch the community and contact them directly if they contribute and carry themselves well in the community.

> Example, /u/tea_and_biology , he's never been a moderator, been a user for two years, and is a zoologist.

He's made four posts to /r/NatureIsMetal and his comments are always packed with animal knowledge.

He's a Trusted User because he's reported something correctly in the subreddit before. He's super qualified to become a mod here and it would be amazing to take the subreddit in a direction like /r/askscience with educated pros actively participating.

The only reason I haven't brought him up as a mod suggestion is because he seems inactive. He's made five really great comments today, but then hadn't commented in 5 days.

I don't want to fill the subreddit with inactive mods like it was before we purged half the team.

If we're talking about bringing on moderators, look into /u/tea_and_biology .

It's also really good to have them contact us unprompted. That's how I joined. I made /r/CritterVsCritter and asked to join here too.

I think we should ask /u/ibarabi why he wants to join, and we can judge on that.

I've probed, I can't find a motive. He might just like the content, or thinks that with how quickly we're growing we could become a default soon.

He's a zoologist! I'll keep an eye on /u/tea_and_biology , I haven't been looking into him too long. He wouldn't make a good mod in terms of removing posts on the new queue but would be really good for knowledgeable stickied comments on threads.

Also, I'm looking into you right now, don't think I ignored that.

An 8 ton orca jumping out if water.

> Here

is a higher resolution version of this image.

According to here:

- These astonishing photographs record the final act of a chase that lasted two hours, and ended with the dolphin trapped in the jaws of the eight-ton orca.
- The dolphin was originally part of a small group swimming off the Mexican coast but the others managed to get away, leaving it at the mercy of a whole pod of whales.

I'm sure many people have never seen this before. Reposts often aren't a bad thing. Some of the previous threads have a lot of useful information about this image. Below are a few helpful comments from previous submissions is the full album. - per /u/nantime here. (though he did miss the last picture in the series)

> > He is finally home.

- per /u/roosterpooper here.

> According to /u/dalcowboiz here:
>
> She came out of the water at 24.4 mph according to my physics/math. She also had the same amount of kinetic energy that a mid size car (3500lbs) would have going about 52 mph.
>
> edit: this is also the first time I have ever put physics to use for plain ol' fun! Note: this is all assuming 20 ft and 8 tons are somewhat accurate.
>
> Edit: thanks for the gold :) and I was challenged to incorporate the orca's horizontal velocity into this equation since I ignored it (we of course can't measure exactly how far she went horizontally). I estimated it to be 24 feet compared to her 20 feet height using the pics posted by /u/KnightOfSunlight and so we have new numbers.
>
> Her new velocity is 25.5 mph coming out of the water which compares with the kinetic energy of a medium sized car going 54.6mph!
>
> Changed it to a girl since /u/lolsmasher said it was a girl!
>
> So many edits: I certainly don't mean to disappoint people so hopefully you aren't but if we look here we see it was probably closer to a 15 foot jump and it isn't clear if it was really 8 tons. I used the number 7257kg for the weight which doesn't seem too crazy as far as orcas go but this one was probably not much more than half that weight. It was probably traveling closer to 22mph and if it was a 4-5 ton whale its kinetic energy was probably closer to that of a medium sized car going 35mph. Regardless of the numbers the picture is still pretty flippin' insane.

Hi mods :)

I hope I'm doing this right - I tried following the guide you made in you pinned mod post about reporting content to keep the sub metal.

I just saw this post (sorry for the long URL, I'm on mobile): https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/54vlup/crow_provokes_cat_fight_then_serves_as_referee/

While it's fun to watch, I can't see how this is metal tbh. I thought I'd just let you know, since you've stated that you like members to help out.

Cheers. LilR3dditRidingHood

Wow, thank you!

It bugs the hell out of me when people don't even check the top 10 before posting or try to karma-whore of other people's great finds by reposting them on purpose, so to be honest it's a win-win for me that I can call them out on it and be helping you mods at the same time :) This is an awesome sub, and I'm sure you mods have shit tons to do, so I think it's great that you allow us users to help keep it that way.

Just a heads up: I pointed out to the posters that the chestnut- and the zebra-spilling-its-guts post are obvious reposts, but they didn't take them down. Just so you know that they are still up - I figured you'd want to delete them? That way others would see that you won't get anything out of reposting karma-wise.

Please let me know if you need help with anything else - I'm home on sick leave atm, so I have plenty of Reddit time.

Thank you again for the Trusted User flair, I'm going to take my time and come up with a good custom flair to get :P

Cheers LilR3dditRidingHood

Moderators cannot delete posts. The links you sent will always redirect to the threads. Unless the submitters choose to delete them.

We can remove posts. They will disappear from the subreddit but not from existence.

Reposting is an issue, but gets easier the more we recognize the common reposts. It helps to have users like you, thanks.

Ahhh ok, so I'll still be able to view them if I have a direct link, but they won't be visible in the sub's feed?

I hadn't thought about it working that way - I've been a moderator on several websites, but im still relatively new to Reddit, so I don't know what tools you moderators have to work with. That's nice to know, so I know what you can and cannot do. Thank you for taking the time to explain that to me, that was nice of you :)

Cheers

Yes, correct. Removed links disappear from the front page of the subreddit and cannot be searched.

I'm not going to tag everything in the subreddit. The subreddit is called NatureIsMetal, most of the content features animals being eaten.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to dublzz M H sent 6 months ago

just stuff that really bloody and what not, i get that. but isn't the point of the tag to make the sub not need to be a nsfw sub. so you can avoid stuff like birds ripping out the guts of an animal through its butt. I'm not gonna send links unless i actually think their nsfw, ignore me if you wish, and don't just take my word for it. check the link and use your mod wisdom to decide if its NSFW or not, i have no issues with blood and gore. i love it, i just don't want other people to click on something they might not want to. nature can be metal without animals being eaten alive.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz [M]N M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 6 months ago

This was never the intended use of the NSFW tag when it was introduced. If the admins begin to introduce tags for gore then we will use them much more frequently, but as it stands tagging things as NSFW will hide posts for many users.

It hurts a submission's chance at reaching /r/all because users with the NSFW filter on to avoid porn will have it hidden from them. This slows the growth of the subreddit and pushes less "metal" content to the front page. It also creates a cycle of complaints that "the subreddit isn't like it used to be".

I try not to tag anything that shows blood as NSFW, but only especially disturbing submissions. This allows content that suits the subreddit to move to the top more easily than if they were tagged.

You were removed along with several other mods because of inactivity, I looked at the logs and found that several mods and not done any moderation duties in several months, I sent a message to all mods saying that even though this had been a problem, I was going to give all mods 24 hours to respond to that message to show they still had interest in being a mod and to stay on. Every active mod responded and all inactive mods did not respond, so the removal.

Yeah, I'm trying to control quality in that thread. It's bringing up the quality comments about tectonic plates:

> I'm not like a PhD or anything but here we see cooled basalt on the surface of molten lava that's flowing from point a to point b. W do see some cool phenomena like "plates" fusing together and accretion or maybe even subduction at the edges. But in plate tectonics the plates are much more brittle, the mantle beneath them is almost solid, and when they collide tend to subduct or if they fuse they generate mountain ranges and earthquakes. Also I don't see mini volcanoes lol. Edit: also this > doesn't appear driven by convection

For this one I was removing low effort jokes and stuff like this:

> Damnit that's so goddamn clever. I hate myself for not thinking of this before. I hate you for making me realize my ineptitude. Have an upvote

Which is literally "I gave you an upvote"

I think your message might have gotten cut off.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz N M H via /r/natureismetal to dublzz sent 6 months ago

Also anything low effort, like all of the LotR quotes:

> Boil em, mash em, stick em in a stew
>
> Poh tay toes
>
> I always read "potato, potato" as "potato, potato"
>
> What's taters, precious?
>
> Lvl up!
>
> /r/IamVerySmart
>
> India slamming into China is the perfect metaphor for my relationship with my girlfriend.
>
> this is...beautiful
>
> lol what i said verbatim
> r/natureismoltenlava For real though, this is amazing.

All of these are low effort, and I'm testing the effect of removing low-effort contents to see how it affects the quality of the discussion.

I only ask this cause /r/Justiceporn is hemorrhaging subscribers cause of uber strictness of mods.

I get wanting to get rid of the absolute shit, but let's not get rid of all the fun a lose people cause of strictness of topic.

Just a suggestion, I trust you

[–] from dublzz [M]N M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 6 months ago

I know, and I don't ever do it this harsh but wanted to see how it would affect everything. The two really good discussions about plate tectonics and the cooling and heating of the magma feel like something that would be discussed in /r/askscience.

I like that kind of quality and it makes us look better as a sub. It's also because the content is more /r/EarthPorn based than something with animals.

With how fast the sub has been growing (5,000 subscribers in about two days) and the fact that we have a front-page post daily (one is #3 on /r/all right now) I think we have a good chance at becoming a default.

/r/NatureIsMetal is exactly the type of thing that would be good as a default too, like /r/WTF or /r/EarthPorn since no other subreddit fits our niche. We have really cool gifs of animals and nature that are often /r/wtf-level.

If the admins are looking to change the default list any time soon, being one of the fastest growing subreddits with non-seasonal content is a big plus.

Greetings metal and animal loving mods,

Never have messaged a mod, so forgive any informalities please.

Just wondered what the nature of the comment on my post is. If you could let me know, I would appreciate it. Even if it's just a random bot, I'm confused by it.

The post is here https://m.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/543d09/metal_barn_owls/d7yjpld?context=3 ; and the comment is from gifv-bot

Thanks,

Hi, I believe you're referring to the comment from the GIFV link bot.

That bot comments on imgur posts that link to gifs with the filename .gif

It leaves a link to the same gif with a filename of .gifv that shows as a type of video. This loads much faster for most users, so it is often helpful.

It is only a bot, there is no need for concern. I hope I explained it well.

Hey guys! Nice subreddit and all, and thanks for the work y'all put in. Raising question in response to posts like this: https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/540t0m/your_move/ which are just pictures of 'dangerous' animals. Something like this could get going in /r/awwducational or similar; hardly a blood-spattered rust-bucket worthy submission. Anything acceptable in /r/aww is not the sort of thing we're here for. It doesn't explicitly mention in the rules or description about not allowing things which are, well, 'too tame' though - so just running this open-ended thought by you.

Cheers and take care,

tea_and_biology

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[−] from dublzz N M H via /r/natureismetal to tea_and_biology sent 6 months ago

Well we don't want to be too tight on content that isn't animals ripping flesh off each other. That would lead to much less content all around.

Whenever a truly gruesome post appears it rises to the top, but there are other things that do not break the rules we have set. This tiger one is exceptionally tame though, so I've removed it.

Things like hurricanes and "metal" facts about animals fall into that grey zone. We try to keep an eye on inappropriate content, so thank you for your help.

You are now a Trusted User.

This post (https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/53q5co/sea_robins_have_six_crablike_legs_that_let_them/) is creepy at best I don't think this should be in the sub given that there is nothing graphic or horrific about it. I don't know if I'm being knite picky because it have some interest already but fuck. I don't see how this fits in nature is metal.

Posts on /r/NatureIsMetal do not have to involve graphic content, they just often do. The post doesn't break any rules, it is an animal with a feature that can be seen as creepy/cool/metal depending on your standards.

The downvote button reads "Not Metal", so vote accordingly if you do not think it is.

Otherwise, the post is nature and does not involve people.

To be fair, just about every predatory animal only kills it's prey to prevent it from fighting back. If they can slowly eat you alive without resistance, they will. I saw a video last week on r/natureismetal of a lioness eating the testicles right off a live immobilized water buffalo. Humans are the most merciful killers in the world. OK, the rules say "no human interaction" but literally the top post is human interaction. Which I don't care much about, humans are part of nature too, but: will my video of a grasshopper chilling on my side mirror at 70 mph be rejected under the human interaction rule?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz N M H via /r/natureismetal to fungoid_sorceror sent 6 months ago

We don't want to apply an ex post facto law that would affect past posts. So we do not bother going through the archive of subreddit history to purge everything that does not fit according to our current rules.

The post you are talking about also does not break current rules, as the attack was not provoked by a human. The ram charges the person on its own, so it is a natural action.

> video of a grasshopper chilling on my side mirror at 70 mph

This would not be removed for human interaction. Content involving man-made objects are not considered human interaction.

Glad you like it. I think by the time we hit 150k that we'll have a lot of Trusted Users.

Then if we want to add moderators we have a big pool of people who have already volunteered to help the subreddit, even without the promise of a moderator position.

That's how we find people that truly want to help.

So we have been getting way higher numbers of reports on reposts and spam and just pure junk being posted.

We have had 25,000 people subscribe since July. We need need at least 2 active mods willing to help us with the work load.

We have two options, we can pull directly from our sub, they will be loyal to its fanbase, or go to findamod and get someone with some experience.

I'm this should get done within the next week or so

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[−] from dublzz [M]N M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 6 months ago

We've been increasing so rapidly because of the front page posts daily. It's best to keep encouraging that.

Hashtagging helps us too. When people reference the sub in /r/askreddit or the like. I set up the bot to notify us of that.

I don't think we should add mods just yet, we're 7k away from 150,000. That's when we should add mods.

I check the reports as often as I can, it just seems like we're getting more because I set AutoMod to notify us of them.

As for where to draw from, I've been keeping track of the users that have reported reposts in the past with cited sources. I want to continue doing this until we have a large pool to draw from.

I have some ideas to increase this, but we shouldn't take the lead to searching for mods just yet.

A lot of users just collect subreddits, especially on /r/needamod. It is always better to find users who genuinely want to help the specific sub, not just mod a large community.

so i used the numbers i could that were all from the daily subscribed since early July, and it shows that we have been seeing an average subscription rate of about 467 people a day, which in percent terms is 0.34% growth daily, calculated against our current subscribed population.

We are continuing to grow fast guys, keep up the good work.

I can see reason to block it, but keep in mind it's not mainly spammers using it.

Here's a link to see the top submissions from dailymotion.com on /r/natureismetal. It's clear that while rarely used, it isn't one user doing it to spam.

Okay guys so I'm subbed to several metal related subreddits. I've been thinking of messaging those mods, introducing them to us, and seeing if we all want to collab on a post such as "what songs/artists would go well with which gif/video?". I like it particularly because of our name, but also because some users have the opportunity to play the song as they watch it, which would be pretty cool. The ones I feel comfortable messaging are:

- r/metalcore
- r/posthardcore
- r/deathcore
- r/melodichardcore
- r/hardcore

Let me know what y'all think!

I was more talking about people constantly ripping on us. The odds of the five of us being on at a given time on a Friday and not being able to do something is very low. I was running errands and gymming and all that went on from 10-5. Not to mention that I just removed a similar abusive post and no one will acknowledge us for that.

TBH I think we need 2-3 more mods so everyone doesn't hate us. But I guess some people will still hate us regardless because they need to manifest their anti-"authority" mentality somehow.

–r/natureismetal 4 We Need Repost Rules

expand all collapse all

[–] from dublzz [M]N M H to /r/natureismetal sent 7 months ago

We need some kind of rules to prevent reposting. Some kind of time cooldown, like no links posted in three months.

Ideas?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to dublzz M H sent 7 months ago

I had suggested that earlier with an auto mod that would delete anything reposted under that time. Didn't know know how to do that though

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz [M]N M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 7 months ago

The trouble with that is that it would rely on the url.

If someone were to download the content and reupload to imgur the url would be different, going undetected by AutoMod.

AM now sends a modmail whenever a user says the word "repost" in a comment, but users don't know that. If they did, it might be abused, or it might make a good difference.

We could tell them that if they comment "repost" on a post, with a link to the first time it was posted, they would get a "trusted user" flair. And if the repost was within three months it would get removed.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz [M] M H to /r/natureismetal sent 7 months ago

Hey guys,

I've been improving AutoModerator.

Any post titled "Meta" or that mentions "Mods" will now prompt a modmail so we can be aware of if users are discussing the subreddit itself.

Any user that comments "repost" will now trigger a modmail and alert us that the post may be a repost. This might happen too often with regular users, and if so I can change it to be more restrictive.

Any post that receives 3 or more reports will now prompt a modmail and let us know we should check it out.

That's all for now, sorry for all the modmails before, I was testing all the rules.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[−] from dublzz M H via /r/natureismetal to misserray sent 7 months ago

Hey guys, thanks for waiting until I got up.

I've read through all the modmail and comments on my post. I should probably also make a post explaining to the subreddit, and I'll do that after this.

This morning I was removing a bunch of posts because I just discovered what the modqueue is. I can't find all the posts I removed, but I did tag these two users as spammers with RES:

https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/4xyddz/its_porcupine_effects_porcupine_fight_with/

https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/4xlvff/warthog_butchers_lion_cheetah_leopard/

https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/4xrn1g/lion_tries_to_kill_baby_on_live_tv/

https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/4xyljx/amazing_bird_attacks_on_snake_lizard_and_human/

I was removing a lot of the backlog reports. This post got a lot of spam reports so I removed it.

https://www.reddit.com/r/natureismetal/comments/4xyta4/hammerhead_shark_eaten_by_bigger_shark/

The domain name is igcdn-videos-e-16-a.akamaihd.net, and I figure it was messing with a lot of users trying to view it properly.

I watched the video though, and it's a good video for /r/natureismetal. So instead of removing it completely I converted the important part into a GIF on gfycat and posted it both to /r/natureismetal and /r/WTF. Since every time a post does well on /r/WTF that references /r/natureismetal we get a spike in subscribers.

Example traffic on 8/12 and the post I made on /r/WTF on 8/12.

I removed it because a lot of users reported the post as spam.

I could have messaged /u/Seaniniho and told him to do the same gfycat conversion thing then post again to the subreddit, but I didn't. I got up for an hour or two, posted a bunch of stuff, went back to bed, and woke up to this.

I can make a post explaining it to the subreddit and they'll lynch me and downvote because no one will listen, but I'm fine with that.

If you remove my moderator permissions for posts I won't be able to use the approve, remove, spam, distinguish, and nsfw buttons anymore. That might look better to everyone.

I would not like to be removed as a moderator since I put a lot of effort into this subreddit with the flairs, the CSS, and the AutoModerator setup. On top of removing spam posts.

Thanks again for waiting for me to explain, this took some time to type out.

After reading this I don't think it was anything intended to be malicious, and I'm vouching for keeping you as a mod, since you do do a TON of work. I think you should make an explanatory post to the users of this sub and maybe PM a few of them the link to it afterwards.

Like /u/saladfury said, you need to explain what happen to the community and apologize for the confusion. Apologize to the op, ask for their forgiveness and take your beating in the comment section. Distinguish and sticky it.

It may have not been to abuse karma gain, but you dun goofed when you reposted it yourself

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from SaladFury [M] M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 7 months ago

Well you know now this brings the question on what the community will be satisfied with. After hearing his side of things, outright removing might not be a good idea. /u/dublzz does a lot of work none of us can really do, plus the good he's done for the sub far outweighs the bad. We might want to do it for the posts though. It's the sort of thing that can quickly lose subs if we don't handle this with the proper care.

[–] from dublzz M H via /r/natureismetal to misserray sent 7 months ago

Responded to everyone on /r/QuitYourBullshit already and everyone on the /r/NatureIsMetal thread.

SaladFury is referring to my wording on "no idea where the video came from" when it came from the post I removed, even though I was referring to where it came from before that since it's a common repost.

I'll make a post on /r/natureismetal and sticky it explaining what I said here.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from SaladFury M H via /r/natureismetal to misserray sent 7 months ago

Bad moderation can easily kill a sub but I don't think a slip up like this can do much damage at all unless stuff like this happens often, I don't think it will have an impact on the sub. I don't think he should be removed as a mod for this, and I don't think our choice should ultimately depend on what some of the users think should happen. I've been on both sides of this and I do think a post and apology from dublzz will be enough.

[–] from dublzz [M] M H to /r/natureismetal sent 7 months ago

Hey all,

I've reformatted the sidebar. All of the rules are the same, things are organized cleaner for readability.

Most Brutal links are no longer urls written out, they are hyperlinked titles.

Graphic Material warning is a button that redirects to the subreddit, the styling makes it stand out more than anything else.

Rules list has headers dividing it into sections, but still no numbered rules. It is cleaner to read now.

Minor text fixes.

It seemed weird to have an orange submit button with no other orange on the page. And after visiting /r/Naut I noticed how nice the header box on the sidebar looked when it matched theme color. So I tweaked for a while and ended up with a good slate color that matched the sidebar image and header. Plus a dark color matches the Metal theme of the subreddit.

So I keep seeing more and more reported posts wanting NSFW/L tags and the more popular we get the more it'll happen. What do you guys think of making the sub a purely NSFW sub? If we miss some posts it could get us in trouble if they reach /r/all too often.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from dublzz M H via /r/natureismetal to SaladFury sent 8 months ago

NO! Making a subreddit NSFW when it isn't a porn sub is one of the fastest ways to stunt growth and kill it.

We've gotten 14 posts today. One has gotten above 1,000 upvotes. We don't get much content as it is.

Making a sub NSFW removes all thumbnails and makes the content invisible to a huge amount of Redditors. Anyone with the NSFW filter on, which it is by default, will not see the content.

That would hurt exposure a ton. We'd see visitors and upvotes drop a lot.

/u/spez recently mentioned refining the tagging system to distinguish better between NSFW content. Like, erotic, NSFL, gore, etc. That will make this subreddit a lot better.

We're not a big enough sub to go NSFW and be alright. It would be like quarantining the subreddit. It is much better to tag posts on an individual basis like the top post today, or waiting for reports.

How long has nsfw been made invisible by default? Never knew that. Also yeah I 100% agree with you after reading that

[–] from dublzz M H via /r/natureismetal to SaladFury sent 8 months ago

I'm not sure for how long, but it even defaults back to it for me daily. Kind of frustrating.

Btw, if you want an example of a NSFW sub that doesn't have NSFW content check out /r/Ohlympics. I've got the top post there at the moment and am getting so many complaints about the NSFW tag even though I cannot turn it off.

Glad you agree, maybe we can find a solution through flairing.

I guess my message didn't actually send earlier. Here's what I said - I think it should stay non-nsfw till an admin tells us other wise. Yes we have nsfw content on here. But our sub offers a lot more than just that. Like dublzz said, it would also diminish our our reach and growth. So we should ride the SFW train till we are forced off of it

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from misserray M H via /r/natureismetal to dublzz sent 7 months ago

I'm with /u/dublzz there's no point in having a pure NSFW sub. One of the consequences is having us grouped with subs like /r/watchpeopledie because the interpretation will be that we're pure gore. That'll fuck the sub's growth for good.

It seems we pop up in just about every thread where there is an animal in nowadays. I was thinking of talking to a couple of subs that were similar or at least relative to us. Trade some side bar space with other subs to mention us and cross promote. Idk if you are already doing that /u/dublzz but you've done so much work on here, your critter vs critter sub should definitely get a cross promote mention. I was thinking about talking to hardcoreaww and maybe trying to get back on WTFs radar now we have 10x as many subscribed since the last time I messaged them. Any else know of any subs I could message?

I have set up AutoMod to flair posts based on domain.

I do not know how to make it distinguish between i.imgur.com (GIFs) and imgur.com (Images). So for now it marks both as [Image].

Does someone else know how to distinguish the two?

Also, it will tag videos from Youtube. And Articles from a few sites, but articles can come from anywhere, so it is harder to have it mark them all.

Your subreddit has been chosen as a trending subreddit for today! Your subreddit will be featured along with a few others on the front page. You can see the comments thread here: /r/trendingsubreddits/comments/4vg7jp/trending_subreddits_for_20160731_rnatureismetal/

What this means:

- You should probably expect more traffic today. You might want to keep a closer eye on moderation than usual.
- Your subreddit has been noticed! Hopefully you feel that's a good thing. If you don't, you can prevent this from happening again by disabling "allow this subreddit to be shown in the default set" in your subreddit settings.
- If you'd like, folks might be discussing your subreddit in the link above. Feel free to interact with them.

Congratulations, mods!

Shouldn't gore fall under NSFL rather than NSFW? NSFL usually means violence, but NSFW is general. Usually porn though. Why isn't gorey stuff NSFL instead?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

Because NSFW is an actual Reddit tag. NSFL is just a distinction users can post if they like, but affects the post in no way.

[–] from ManofTheNightsWatch [M] M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 9 months ago

I don't think that's possible. Reddit already does not allow duplicate posts. So reposts will have to come from reuploads or URL shortened. We can ban URL shorteners but I think automod is not smart enough to recognize same images.

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from ManofTheNightsWatch [M] M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 9 months ago

Artists usually work off ideas. Let's think of a Redditch alien concept and we can get someone to do it and possibly add their own twist to it. OR we can make a contest out of it and get submissions from our community

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to ManofTheNightsWatch M H sent 9 months ago

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 9 months ago

If missarray or dublzz or nightswatch could address the community about the snoo concept contest. That would be awesome.

We can either have it be chosen by the most upvoted or have the top three upvoted make it to the next round where we the mods will choose the winner. I think if we gave them a week or two to get concepts up and it gives enough people to cast a vote.

Just remember to sticky and distinguish the post.

I've been modding as best I can from my phone the past two weeks. It's not that effective :|

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from misserray [M] M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 9 months ago

I don't like the whole top upvoted thing, since the Reddit system is inherently flawed. Why don't we just make this post, and then we can make another thread in two weeks where we let the community decide by a vote or something?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to misserray M H sent 9 months ago

So have people submit them, we pick the top 3 then have the community pick the best. Is that what you mean?

permalink spam remove report block user mark unread reply

[–] from misserray [M] M H via /r/natureismetal to [deleted] sent 9 months ago

No, I mean like going by karma will just mean the first submission (not necessarily the best) will get upvotes. So I'm suggesting we take all submissions, and we put them up on like some sort of voting site and have the users use that to determine the winner.

[–] from dublzz [M] M H to /r/natureismetal sent 9 months ago

You may know that /r/NatureIsMetal has recently reached the top 500 subreddits with 112,559 subscribers. Its size has doubled since January 2016.

We must continue to grow! It is our nature. This subreddit has surpassed /r/nature itself. This sub can reach the Top 100.

Top 300 is at 151,711 subscribers. 38,732 away. On average we get 500 subscribers per day, except when we hit front page. Then we get more than 1,000. So if we begin to hit the front page more often, we will hit Top 300 in about a month. Top 200 in two.

How do we hit the front page and how many upvotes does it take?

On days that we have a post hit 5,000 upvotes or 2 posts with 1,000 each we tend to hit the 1,000+ sub rate. So we should incentivize posts. Flairs, colored usernames, etc. Rewarded for hitting a certain level of karma.

This would also see a surge in karma whores, unless we stipulate that the reward would only be for original content, not reposts to the subreddit. We sticky a thread, a contest for the week. "Any post that receives #### upvotes will win a colored username/custom flair text." A rush of users and posts for the week will generate more content and hopefully more top posts.

Opinions welcome. I want to see this sub conquer. Ideas, criticism, please.

Sincerely, dublzz.

If you would like a flair or colored username, name it and I will do it. You can choose your flair text and color, or username color.

/u/kforrest59 , accept my tribute of a rainbow username and God flair. If you instead wish for something different I will oblige.

But basically I was messing around with the CSS. Message back for flair.

I realize the very first bullet point on your Subreddit Info page explicitly warns viewers of the board of the graphic nature of this subreddit, and warns those that cannot handle it to leave immediately. However, a lot of content from this sub has been reaching the front few pages lately, and I was wondering if it'd be too much too ask that posts here get tagged NSFW for the sake of those of us that aren't actively visiting the subreddit.

Hey guys,

I know we have a rule against direct human involvement in violence, but I came across this video of traditional persistence hunting. This is thought to be the sort of hunting technique that humans evolved for, running prey down with an effective bipedal gait and evaporation cooling in the form of sweat. In my opinion this technique of endurance is both natural and extremely metal. The only tools involved is a container of water and a throwing spear to deliver a coup de grace.

To cut to the chase I was wondering if it would be allright to post. I am willing to give prostrations and sacrifices to /u/kforrest59 if required.

Hey mods! Here's the low-down on everything Subreddit of the Day.

Info

All you guys have to do is this: individually reply to me with your responses to the questions below (if you'd like to participate), and I'll do the rest.

- All mods are welcome to answer any and all of the questions below, just remember to number your answers appropriately.
- You can skip any questions as well.
- The feature is generally posted within a few weeks, so don't forget to respond as soon as you can!

Questions

1. Share a bit about yourself! (You personally, not your subreddit)
2. What's your favorite predatory animal?
3. What have you learned from modding /r/natureismetal?
4. What's your favorite post that you've seen so far?
5. What kinds of submissions do you want to see more of?
6. Anything else you'd like to add?

Simple as that! Feel free to ask any questions you may have if you're confused or unsure about something.

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[–] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to joshguillen M H sent 1 year ago

Hey sorry, I have a job that takes up a lot of my time,

Um let see, I'm 22, recent college graduate, I'm big into gaming as well as hiking kayaking and hunting. Favorite games are skyrim, witcher and legend of Zelda,

Favorite predatory animal is the wolf

Favorite post is the crocodile that attacks the zebra in the river and gets disemboweled, that's what sparked me creating this sub.

Things I learned from modding is that there is a lot of grey area when it comes to what is allowed on the sub, it's a case by case basis on how I decide what stays.

I'd like to see more marine life posts on this sub.

I started this sub on a whim, continuously linked the sub in any post I found relevant, I would be the only one posting in this sub to make it feel active even though there would be 10-20 people in it. After 5-6 months I had a sub base for 3k-4k and it took off from there. 1 1/2 years later there are 52k subscribed, I like to think my constant upkeep paid off. Now I just sit back a let the people guide the sub and they've been really enjoying it so far.

> Share a bit about yourself! (You personally, not your subreddit)

In the reddit world, I am known for making CSS themes for subreddits. Tech support by profession.

> What's your favorite predatory animal?

Not animal but the forces of nature are the most powerful predators.

> What have you learned from modding /r/natureismetal?

That reddit likes when we point out how brutal nature is. "Civilization" has made us feel safe and forget how nature operates. Nature does not owe us anything. There is no grand purpose to life that people like to believe in. That deer which got chomped by the crocodile did no wrong and it is not being punished because of bad karma. It has just met the harsh reality of life.

> What's your favorite post that you've seen so far?

Videos of mantis shrimp smashing live crab's shell. It's interesting how such a small animal can accelerate the appendages to bullet like speeds underwater overcoming the drag forces.

> What kinds of submissions do you want to see more of? I'd like to see more videos hit the top spots. Gifs are the ones who get popular.

What are your thoughts on the chunk of submissions of pics of animals looking "cool" or "interesting"? Should these posts be allowed even if they have no "graphic material that involves wild animals hunting... fighting... feeding"?

Is the mod team planning to allow softer posts or encourage more graphic or "metal" posts?

Thanks.

expand all collapse all

[–] from Deimorz [A] M H to /r/natureismetal sent 1 year ago

Hi /r/natureismetal mods,

As you probably already know, on December 15 we started running all old deleted accounts through a cleanup process that (among some other things) removed the deleted accounts from subscriber lists. This cleanup process finished running on January 6, and since then I've had a number of mods contact me to ask exactly how many subscribers this caused their subreddits to lose. So I decided to just send out a modmail to everyone that lost at least 100 subscribers to give them that information:

There were 244 old deleted accounts that were still being counted as subscribers in /r/natureismetal that were removed by the cleanup. Going forward, deleted accounts will automatically be unsubscribed 90 days after the account is deleted.

Please let me know if you have any questions, thanks for all your hard work as always.

Just go to Subreddit setting to make any sidebar revsions and stuff.

as for the repost part. if its like within a few hours of the original post, take it down. just try to let them know why. if its a repost but the last time it was posted was a month(s) ago, leave it. we get a lot of new subscribers and it gives them a chance to see stuff.

−r/natureismetal Thoughts on an addition to the sub

expand all collapse all

[−] from elkarcher87 [M] M H to /r/natureismetal sent 1 year ago

I've been thinking of adding to the sidebar with a list of other subs that also have metal nature such as /r/mineralporn and some others. I was also thinking about possible categories such as "Environmental" "Morphologic" and "symbiotic," where environmental is just the physical aspect of nature. Morphologic being individual animals that look metal in themselves. And symbiotic being animals fighting. Any thoughts on this?

permalink spam remove report block user mute user mark unread reply

[−] from [deleted] via /r/natureismetal to elkarcher87 M H sent 1 year ago

Sounds great. I currently have no computer to do any sidebar stuff. I've been trying to moderate as much possible from my phone.

If your inspired, go ahead , maybe talk to mods of those subs, see if they want to cross promote.

I know the sidebar is non existent, if you want to do some basic rules or what's allowed, what's not, do's and donts. That would be a great help.

Don't feel obligated.

Thanks for the enthusiasm

I have tried X-Posting an image lately that I thought would fit the theme of the subreddit, but it isn't showing up in the new section. Can you check the filter for some posts? (I have tried submitting A LOT of the same thing lately, sorry about that, I didn't think about reading the reddit FAQ until today...)

Hi there /r/natureismetal mods,

Your subreddit has been chosen as a trending subreddit for today! Your subreddit will be featured along with a few others on the front page. You can see the comments thread here: /r/trendingsubreddits/comments/2w24kt/trending_subreddits_for_20150216_rvagabond/

What this means:

- You should probably expect more traffic today. You might want to keep a closer eye on moderation than usual.
- Your subreddit has been noticed! Hopefully you feel that's a good thing. If you don't, you can prevent this from happening again by disabling "allow this subreddit to be shown in the default set" in your subreddit settings.
- If you'd like, folks might be discussing your subreddit in the link above. Feel free to interact with them.

Congratulations, mods!

-Your friendly trending bot, made by your friends at reddit.

I finished most of the theme work. I wanted to incorporate the animals and gory photos but that proved difficult for me. I went for blood and gore instead. I need some feedback.

I can still play around with the subreddit button colours and text colours

Maybe with the way the thread looks on the front page of NiM, they could be a different color? White background with what you've done (which is awesome) doesn't really mix well.

D8D8D8 or #300000.

[–] from [deleted] to /r/natureismetal sent 2 years ago

hey guys, great news, the sub is blowing up, its been less that 20 days and we already have over 500 subscribers. i talked to some of the mods at /r/wtf and they said that if we get to 1000 that we would be a featured/promoted on their sub.

i have brought on about 2-3 new mods recently to do css and other general sub immanence and over watch.

To my css guy: i say lets start with the banner, get some gnarly pictures of animals fighting, or any feature of an animal that makss you think "holy shit that's badass." i leave it up to artists discretion, come up with one or two mock ups and we can decide what needs changed or if they look sweet and to run with it.

take it easy
